Kabul tortures political prisoners

NEW DELHI, Dec. 13 (AP) - An American scholar, recently released from detention in Kabul, said Wednesday that the new revolutionary regime has fortured political prisoners.

Dr. Louis Duprec, 54, an anthropologist who has carried out research in this central Asian country since 1949, said he was shown torture victims by Afghan secret police who tried to pressure him into confession allegedly for being a U.S. Central Intelligence Agency

"I saw them beat some people there," said Dupree, a professor at Pennsylvania State University, who was held six days at the interior ministry and three other places in the Afghan capital before being expelled Dec. 1.

They would begin by slapping and hiting with fists and kicking," he told the Associated press. "I must confess, that after the first couple of times, I just closed my eyes and lurned my back."

Among the victims was Muhammad Alam Nuristani, a graduate of Indiana University in the United States, who taught anthropology aı Kahu) University, he said.

They showed me him and he had been beaten half to death," said Dupree. "The poor man was almost out of his mind and obviously he would have confessed to anything they wanted him to."

Many of those he met in detention had been arrested for distributing underground newspapers critical of President Nur Muhammad Taraki's pro-Soviet regime, which seized power April 27 in a coup that toppled President Muhammad Daoud,

The underground papers, mimeographed sheets known collectively as the "Evening News," are being produced by a Muslim group and a leftist faction which took part in the coup but since purged, he said,

Fluent in the local tanguages, Dupree said he learned from fellow prisoners of scattered insurrections in the countryside against the new leaders whom he said have alienated many of the nation's intellectuals and Muslim holymen.

Nuristani's arrest and torture could bave been the result of a vendetta, he said. The Afgban scholar is a member of the Nuristani tribe which angered the new regime by murdering three of its officials and returning their bodies headless, he said.

"When they brought Muhammad Alam (Nuristani) in front of me, he was in complete terror." Dupree said. "His upper lip was covering his lower lip, he could hardly see, he had a month's growth of beard, Scars all over... They had a

Massive fuel conflagration costing Rhodesia millions

- South Africa Wednesday joined the battle against the biggest fire in southern Africa's history, a huge blaze raging for the third day at a major fuel depot attacked by black insurgents out to strangle Rhodesia's economy.

Salisbury Fire Chief Vin Lowrie said there will be pockets of fire "for many days and probably weeks" but that blaze, which has already cost Rhodesia millions of dol-lars of precious fuel, was being brought under control.

NINE COUNTRIES CLOSE TO OUR CUSTOMERS' HEARTS

The clients of an internationally active commercial bank expect more than just comprehensive financial services. They want reliable background information and advice about their foreign markets - about opportunities for exports, imports and joint ventures, about the selection of building sites for direct investments, about the real estate situation and a multitude of other aspects.

DG BANK Deutsche Genossenschaftsbank of Frankfurt is the central bank and "international arm" of a system comprising close to 5,000 local and ten regional banks in the Federal Republic with millions of customers for whom we compile, analyze and evaluate this kind of information from all over the world. In the United States, Great Britain, Luxembourg, Switzerland and Hong Kong we maintain our own bases of operation. Countries and markets especially close to our domestic customers' hearts also include Australia, Brazil, Canada, Iran, Japan, Mexico, Norway, Sweden and Venezuela.

Likewise, for our international clientele, we provide in-depth grass-root information on West Germany. We have the facilities it takes to do so: Our system operates 19,400 offices – nearly one out of every two in the Federal Republic and, indeed, the most extensive national banking network in all of Western Europe.

With consolidated assets of DM 43.3 billion

(the equivalent of US S20.6 billion), DG BANK ranks among the leading financial institutions in West Germany, and our system commands consolidated total assets of nearly DM 240 billion (or US $114 billion).

NAIROBI As Kenya observed its 15th antiversary of independence from British rule Dec. 12, the country was already firmly set on a new course, which Ken-yans now colloquially refer to as "Chapter Two". This is independent Kenya with Jomo Kenyatta no longer at the helm, but led by President Daniel Arap Moi since the "founding father's" death last August

Just who were behind the Venezuela's puritan president

By Hugh O'Shaughnessy

LONDON-It's going to be a quieter Venezuela when the 53-yearold Luis Herrera Campins takes over the presidency early next year from Carlos Andres Perez.

Perez has presided over five affluent years as the price of oil, the country's main export, went through the roof. But with Veoezuela's insatiable appetite for imports now starting to outrun the treasury's ability to pay for them and with many grandiose developments starting to cost much more than was ever dreamt of. Venezuelans face a period of relativa austerity over the next five years.

Luis Herrera is well fitted for the task of persuading his countrymen to pull their helts in. In cootrast to the ebullient extroversion and ready laugh of Perez, Herrera's maoner is more reserved and even diffident. Though his party COPEI, a Christian Democratic group, claims it has an ideology which is very distinct from President Perez's mildly social democratic Accioo Democratica, the practical differences hetween them are not great and the COPEI victory this week will not briog any sudden doctrioal shifts in the Venezuelan poli-

Sensing perhaps that the Venezuelan electorate wanted a period of greater auslerity, hoth Accion Democratica and COPE1 fielded very similar can. didates, Luis Herrera's nival, Luis Pinerua Ordaz, being if anything more reserved and introspective than Herrera himself.

Herrera is a man whose childhood was passed frugally and in the shadow of political dictatorship and he therefore may be expected to value money and Venezuela's oewly-established parliamentary cus-toms very highly.

He says he remembers the terror imposed on the country under the rule of the tyrant Gomez and how the people of Acarigua would shut the doors and windows before voicing any criticism of the hrutal dictator.

loday he promises to maintain democratie liberties but adds that the wants a "strong government".

Herrera aims to hecome something of a puritan in a country where millions of people have never had it so good.

Soviet headaches in Abkhazia

MOSCOW -A $775-milion Soviet effort to pacify a rebellious minority in one of the Soviet Union's main southern holiday areas has apparently failed to quelt an embarrassing dash of nationalities in this nation where such conflicts are officially demied.

Recent Western and Soviet tourists alike report that the Abkhazian Autonomous Republic has been beset in reand such an influx of police and Soviet internal troops that the score suggests that something approaching martial law

Two Western diplomats stationed in Moscow were denied permission to visit Sukhumi, capital of Abichazia, last month an what observers interpreted as a tacit admission of major disturbances there. The city was closed to them for reasons of a temporary nature, Soviet officials said an excuse that has been used in the past to prevent Westerners from visiting areas of particularly active national

There are centuries-old rivalries between the Abkhazies and the matives of Georgia, of which Abkhazia is organizationally a part. But the specific issue that has caused the recent flareup last December is an Abkhazy demand that their tiny republic be allowed to secode from Georgia and join the neighboring Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic dissent.

The Ablabazies contend that they are so discriminated against both economically and culturally in their own autonomous republic that their national culture is in danger of being obliterated. They represent only about 16 percent of Abkhazia's 500,000 population, while Georgians account for 41 percent. A large number of Abkhazians apparently feel chat their region would be less visible, and therefore they would enjoy greater autonomy, as part of the much larger Russian republic

After a series of mass meet tings earlier this year, the Abkhazian Communist Party chief was replaced and one of the Kremlin's top troubleshooters was sent to the Republic to try and restore order. Moscow pledged a 500 million rugram to bolster the Republic's economy and to satisfy such cultural demands as the creation of a new Abkhazian university and establishment of a local television station.

The Kremtin refused, bowever, to bow on the secession question, undoubtedly for fear that granting that right to one national group might put ideas into the heads of others. The authorities also flatly surned down a demand that Georgian be removed as one of the three official languages recognized in the Abkhazian constitution. . The new reports of trouble indicate that the Abidiazies are far from satisfied.

A Russian woman who vacationed recently in Sukhumi and neighboring Noviy Afon said that she and her husband found three major tourists attractions closed for two days. They included some famous caves at Noviy Afon, a botanical garden, and a monkey zoo. When the couple inquired about the reason, they were told that it was part of a republic-wide protest in support of the secession demand.

The Russian woman said she also saw cafeterias closed and talked with other Soviet vacationers who reported similar strikes in Gudauta, another Abkhazian coastal city. She said she also saw an unusual number of police on the streets, including some brought in from the north.

A Moscow man who also vacationed recently in Ahkhazis said there had been a brawl in a restaurant in Gagra, north of Sukhumi, between Abkhazians and Georgians. Furniture was smashed and windows broken in the restaurant, he said. Later, he reported, the authorities blocked the main roads leading from Georgia to Abkhazia to prevent revenge-seeking Georians from reaching the Autonomous Republic.

An American couple who toured Sukhumi in mid October said they saw large numbers of soldiers there. "They were everywhere we went, said the American woman.

Western diplomats io Moscow said they have heard unconfirmed reports that armed bands of Abkhazies had been seen around Suddumi early in October, apparently on the prowl for Georgians.

The dictionals also quuted another Soviet source as saying that the ruling polithoro has ordered a further purge of Abkhazian officials. The comminting trouble in Den Uyl's government took a certain pride in occasionally exasperating its allies within NATO hy refusing to toe the line. In 1974 its plans for defense cuts drew an unprecedented blast of criticism from NATO Secretary-General Joseoh Luns, a former Dutch foreign minister.

Defense Minister Henk Vredeling replied by telling an interviewer he felt a strong desire to kick Luns "between the goalposts."

Poreign Minister Max Van Der Stoel and Development Aid Menister Jan Pronk, both Socialists tike Vredeling, also had their share of clashes with less radical colleagues from other Western governments.

Pronk in particular caused controversy at home hy giving foreign aid to Cuba and subsidies to left-wing political protest groups in Holland, Aid to Cuba will cease at the end of 1978, and in other areas too there have been changes, though more in style then in substance.

Foreign Minister Christoph Van Der Klaauw, a mild-mannered career diplomat, has been trying to wean his country away from its tendency to raise an admonishing finger at the rest of the world.

"People here make so much the leaders of the "Charter 77" human rights movement. On occasions when the government has responded to public pressure in Holland to make a public gesture, the results have not always been hapov.

After a series of trials of Soviet dissidents this summer, Vice-Premier Hans Wiegel announced relations with the Soviet Union were heing frozen.

The Foreign Ministry hastened to tone this down, explaining that relations with Moscow were merely being reviewed during a "pause for thought."

A few weeks later the pause for thought ended and Prime Minister Van Agt announced relations with the Soviet Union would continue exactly as be-

Some commentators have pointed out that Van Agt, a former justice minister, is a novice in foreign affairs and out of his depth. when he has to deal at summit meetings with political heavyweights such as West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

Van Der Klaauw, an amiahle pipesmoker with no known enemies, has suffered from lackof familiarity with Dutch domestic politics after spending many years abroad, representing his country at the United Nations in New York and Geneva.

The foreign minister has found himself mauled by the opposition in the Dutch parliament, where diplomatic etiquette is unknown.

Holland adjusts course "It's totally different. Dip-Iomacy is a bit i'ke judo, white politics is more like boxing. Now I have to learn to box." Van Der Klasuw admitted rue

The government's lack of authority in parliament led it into a series of humiliations over the question of emished uranium deliveries to Brazil. The controversial uranium deal was eventually approved, but the coalition rabinet still has another explosive foreign posey issue hanging over its head.

This is the neutron bomb. America's new enhanced radiation nuclear washead, whose production has been postroned by President Carter in an attempt to obtain disarmament concessions from Moscow.

Before President Carter's decision the neutron bomb imme provoked the resignation of Van Agt's defense minister, Roelof Kruisings, after only three months in office.

Kruisinga's departure brought another Christian Democrat, financial expert Willem Scholten, to the Defense Ministry with the task of restoring the credibility of Holland as a NATO ally.

Defense spending has been raised to meet NATO targets despite cuts in other areas, Ocders are on the way for new submarines, new marine patroi aircraft and new tanks.

Meanwhile the intense debate in Holland around the issue of nuclear weapons, which led over a million Dutch people to sign a petition against the neutron bomb early this year. has died down - but only temporarily. Under pressure from the Dutch churches. Van And own Christian Democrats are likely to resist any possibility of the neutron bomh being stockpiled in Holland or supplied to Dutch NATO forces.

The Christian Democratic floor leader in parliament, Willem Aantjes, has raised the possibility of Holland leaving NATO altogether if President Carter gives the go-ahead for production of the weapon in the next few months.

If however the president decides to renounce the weapon completely, no one will be more relieved than the Dutchgovernment - (R)

The resolutions of the conference should emphasize the "Al-Medina" said that the just-concluded OAPEC, meeting basic requirements of international wellbeing by combatting and the forthcoming OPEC meeting appear to be the least alarming conferences of oil ministers to date.

"The reason is that the other oil exporting countries have come to the conclusion that Saudi Arabia's prudent approach to oil prices is the hest and wisest. Saudi Arahia has always helieved that oil prices should serve the interests of the producers and consumers alike, and that discussions of oil increases should be reasonable. While trying to avoid any harm to the world economy, the Saudi government has also made it imperative on the industrialized nations to combat inflation and control currency fluctuations."

"Okea" also commented on the OPEC meeting and said that it was "another indication of the strength of the oil producing countries which lies in their unity."

The success of OPEC is an expression of the unity of the Arah countries as well as the Arah desire for justice, right and peace. OPEC realizes too that the prosperity and well-being of the world is an indivisible matter and that working towards it is an important OPEC objective.

oo such a plan is bewildering. The paper, io another comment, said King Hussein's visit to France had a military and a political reason.

It added: "perhaps the United States and Egypt wanted the French President to put pressure on King Hussein to join the Camp David accords. But this is impossible because the King will not change his mind.

The King would also seek French military supplies to diversify his armory. Jordan now depends almost entirely on American and British arms supplies and recently has bought some from the Soviet Union.

"The King may want to increase the quota of French arms just in case...," the paper said. "Al-Medina" discussed the increasing number of non-

Muslims who convert to Islam in Saudi Arabia. The paper said it does not agree with those who believe that some of these people convert out of convenience, either to be able to work in the pilgrimage sites where non-Muslims are forhidden entry, or to be able to marry Muslim girls or to divorce a wife since this is permitted in Islam. But the writer criticised the lengthy process of accepting these converts and giving them certificates of conversion to Islam. He said that the red tape involved in this process is tedious and takes far too long.

The writer proposed an Islamic center to teach converts the precepts of Islam "instead of relying on translations. He cited the example of an Italian convert who read the Koran in his own language but could not understand it.

Bahrain-Al Khobar by dhow: A pleasure

By Mary Jo McConahay modern, bustling Bahrain has MINA MANAMA - By air been left behind.

> Dhows are anchored two and three abreast on either side of the pier, and early in the morning there is activity in every quarter, Men wash clothes and hang them on lines strung across the boats, and some mend nets alone or with their fellow crewmen. On one dhow about five sailors sit crosslegged on the deck, eating from a circular tin dish beaped with rice and fish, and someone emerges from below with a buge, beaked coffee pot. Men with mature faces but strong, bare backs walk among burlap sacks of grain or the fish Iraps which look like chain link igloos stacked along the edges of the pier. A truck pulls up and workers begin loading huge blocks of ice, walking ibem across the water onto the deck on a plank less than half a meter wide. The ice will be used to preserve the day's catch until the boat returns to port at night.

There is some important advice to remember when asking for a boat to Al Khobar: be persistent. If the first person you ask says no, walk around ask again, and chances are you will find someone who is going - if not going right away.

There is no such thing as a reservation so it is best to arrive early, say about 7:30 a.m. or so. Although the boat may not actually leave until 9:00 or later often the captain will decide whether or not to prepare for a trip based on bow many prospective passengers show interest.

At the pier, immigration procedures are quick and easy, because there are no crowds. And baggage handling is a snap: you load your own. On the dhow the passenger can rest easy, unually perched on top of his own suitcase.

When passengers are ready spread a thin mat to sit on, can provide extra eushioning as you lie or lean against the low rail surrounding the wooden deck. Now it is time to guess what the fare will be. This depends on how many people show up for the trip: the more the cheaper. The captain may quote a price of eight dinars at first (about 80 riyals), but, as was the case when a family with their goats came late to board the boat i was on, the fare went down to six. On busy days, when the dhow carries 40 or more passengers, travelers report paying less than three dinars. Money is collected in a plastic bag and tickets are distributed in the form of cardhoard forms cut to uniform size and trading cards bearing the likenesses of TV heroes Kojak or the Bionie Woman, These are collected again out at sea. At one time, when the fleet of pearling dbows sailed off from some Gulf beach, they were given farewell by crowds beating drums and singing. Today the departure of a dhow is signalled by the revving of a pultering motor which will propel the craft across this stretch of the Gulf.

Despite the use of engines instead of sails, however, dhows loday look much as they did before the oil hoom, when pearling and fishing were the livelihoods of the inhabitants of the Eastern Province coast towns, and especially of Bahrain, Qatar and Kuwait. Even the few remaining native shipbuilders still trust eye and thumb more than blueprints. They use naturally shaped tree trunks for the ribs, then add the stern board and build up the buil. They use iron nails today, the shallow waters of its home tom. The captain looks very

We leave the last of the triand a rolled-up towel or coat angular fish traps set hundreds of meters off the Bahraini coast. Together they louk like so many long arrows pointing in different directions, and the waters become smooth and quiel. It is one of those days when sea and sky shimmer with the same gray-blue light, and it is difficult to tell where one ends and the other begins. The irip is blessedly uneveniful, and most passengers pass the hours sleeping or talking quietly ur gazing down at the water, which is almost close enough to touch. On Fridays the dhow is a sort of student shuttle, and someone may bring out a plaslic flute or sing.
In general, however, entertainment is provided by one's own thoughts or by an occas'onal splashing dolphin. The sand bar in the distance, says the man at the helm, has its own fresh water supply. Hur dreds of cormorants fly overhead in an undulating vee, or skim like endless ellipses ahead water. Great flapping fish jump into the air and disappear again. In between, silence out far and nearby, the hum-putter of the engine and the sound of water gently lapping by. After an indeterminate period of time the crewman who has been bringing hot tea from below appears with the green flag of Saudi Arabia, and takes down Bahrain's red and white from the aft pole. When the Saudi flag is hoisted we are in local water, and soon the cranes and tall buildings of Dammam's skyline appear on the horizon. We turn to head in the direction where Al Khobar should be, and one by one begin to pick out the landmarks of that town as well. Now the but still employ bow rather than young captain orders every-one electric drills. The result is a aft to stand and go forward; solid, satisfying boat which this is a dangerous shoal, and looks and feels appropriate for the keel must not scrape bot-young, and has probably navigated this passage alone only hundreds - not thousands of times, so beads of perspiration torm on his upper during the long minutes. Finally we reach the channel and in is smooth sailing from here to the tiny port of Al Khobar. On shore a single official enmes to meet the dhuw, and there is promise of another easy, uncrowded processing on arrival. But beyond the port one hears the horns and senses the frenzy of the town. The captain puts away the compass and urges his passengers onto the dock. Some appear reluc-

"The classic tea time meal, 'dim sum.' literally translated, means to lightly touch the heart. I think it is a great shame that the poetry is lost in the translation.

"There is a Shankhai dish where only the tail of the fish is eaten. This is called 'water beater,' which perfectly expresses the visual element of the fish's tail propelling itself. In English, however, this has somehow came to be known as 'stewed fish tail' or maybe number 15 nn the menu."

In 1968 Chow opened his restaurant, specializing in Peking cuisine but incorporating Cantonese, Shanghai and Szechuan dishes. Instead of the usual dark red chinoiserie decor, Chow's interior was a light, airy blend of greenery, chrome, smoked perspex, and Warhol prints.

"I wanted to get away from the Anna May Wong look, with an international setting and authentic Chinese cuisioe, he said.

Chnw decided to give his customers knives and forks rather than chopsticks. You shouldn't use them un-

Chnw's Knightshridge restaurant caught on quickly. though the clientele was surprised at the decor and different style.

"Because of the international atmosphere," Chow said, "snme penple thought they weren't eating true Chioese food. In fact, they were eating a sampling of the hest Chinese cuisine I could make." Moratorium imposed on building in UAE

ABU DHABI, Dec. 13 (R) - United Arab Emirates (UAE) President Sheikh Zayed Bin Sukan al-Nahyan Wednesday imposed a moratorium on building in the UAE, other than for use by owners. the official Emirates News Agency reported.

The agency said the presideat had ordered banks to stop financing investments in the construction industry.

He also ordered the establistament of a real estate bank with a capital of one billion dirhams (about $250 million) and ao industrial bank to finance industrial projects in the country,

The move was taken to stiimilate the country's economy and streamline its development programs.

In May last year, the UAE faced a banking crisis as banks poured large sums in the construction sector and the result was many new building not finding users.

Up to 40 per cent of bank lending has so far been for

BP leads European companies

LONDON, Dec. 13 (AP) -British Petroleum (BP), the state comrolled oil giant, has become the biggest company in Europe and the sixth largest in the world, according to a new book.

The Times 1000," an annual review of leading compapublished by Times ks, calculated company rankings by total sales through 1977 and said BP displaced Royal Dutch Sheel of the Netherlands, which was first in the previous edition-BP sales totalled 14.7 billion pounds (nearly $30 billion) and Royal Dutch 13.6 billion pounds ($27 billion).

A separate table of the 100 leading American companies showed five with bigger sales than BP-Exxon, General Motors, Ford, Mobil and Texaco.

Oil and chemical companies predominate in the European top 20. Another British oil giant, Shell Transport and 1-rading, ranked third with sales of 11.3 billion pounds ($22.6 billion).

As a nule, manufacturers tike to keep a 60-day supply of cars on hand. Chrysler's supply, swollen by slow sales recently, is well above that.

The industry had 1,728,000 unsold cars at the end of November, according to the trade publication "Ward's Automotive Reports." Chrysler's share was 304,000 cars, or a 95-day supply. American Motors Corp. had a 96-day supply, Ford Motor Co. 68 days and General Motors Corp. 43 days. Chrysler lost $247.8 million in the first nine months, of the year, 158.5 million of that in the third quarter.

U.S. modifies plan to fight inflation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13 (AP) - The Carter administration Wednesday modified some of its wage and price standards. including easing limits on frio-ge benefits, after hearing complaints that parts of the antiinflation plan are unfair.

The changes were the finishing touches on a major program announced seven weeks ago intended to bring inflation from the current 91 per cent a year down to 6 per cent of lower. Administration officials say the program may last for several months but the administration took steps to close what it considered loopholes allowing many companies to exceed the standard.

The administration also asked doctors, dentists and other professionals to limit their price increases to 6.5 per cent under the new program. Many professionals did not have the needed records to comply with the regular price standards.

Italian parties, Andreotti reach no agreement on EMS

ROME, Dec. 13 (AP) - A meeting of leaders of the five majority parties with Premier Giulio Andreotti called to discuss Italy's entry the European Monetary System (EMS) broke up Wednesday with oo apparent change io opposition from the Socialists and Communists.

The summit was called by the Socialists after Andreotti told parliament Tuesday Italy had decided to enter the EMS. effective Jan. I.

The decision drew negative reactions from both the Communists and the Socialists who along with the Republicans, Christian Democrats the support Andreotti's Christian Democratic government in the partiament.

The Communists and the Socialists opposed the decisioo saying it was premature for Italy to join the EMS and on the grounds the guarantees offered to Italy's shaky economy by other EMS partners were insufficient.

At the end of the summit both the Communists and the Socialists said they had called meetings of their own parties directorates to further study the thorny issue.

Brazilian stars enjoy mixed fortunes abroad

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 13 (R) — The International Foot-ball Federation (FIFA) decision to step in to settle the wrangle between the Saudi club. Al-Hilal, and Fluminense over payment for the transfer of Brazilian midfield star Roberto Rivelino, has shown that it is not all plain bailing for Brazilian stars seeking contracts abroad.

Wheo Fluminense threatened to sue Hilal over non-payment. the Saudi club replied that the entire malter was a surprise to it and invited the Rio club to seod a representative to Riyadh to discuss the matter. Fluminese refused and took its case to FIFA.

FIFA reacted by banning Rivelino from playing for Hilal until the initial $200,000 had been paid, further supulating that payment be made to FIFA. who would remit it to the Braziliani Sports Confederation and then lift the suspension.

Brazil losi another good, if controversial player, when Cosmos of New York bought Francisco de Chagas Marinbo, the blond Flummense left back who made such an impact dur-ing the 1970 Mexico World Cup.

"Kiog" Pele, actiog as Cosmos representative, paid over $300,000 for the transfer and flew back to New York with Marinho.

According to Pele, Marinho will receive $200,000 from Cosmos for two seasons; plus procheds from any advertising cootracts he may pick np.

Paulo Cesar Lima, the Botalogo forward had less luck. After rows with Botafogo directors and teammates, Paulo Cesar was given permission to go to Europe.

English Second Division club Fulham tried to sign him but apparently the temperamental black player, who blames his unpopularity in Brazil on ra-

Japan, with 23 golds, draws four clear of China

14 Asian Games records shattered in four sports

BANGKOK, Dec. 13 (AP)

— Japan swam off with five more gold medals in Asian Games record time Wednesday, taking away the overall gold medal lead from China on the games' fifth day, but a Chinese diver beat the world record.

Games records were set in both men's and women's high diving — both by Chinese — all six of the day's swimming races, four shooting events and two weightlifting classes. So far, records bave been chalked up in all 12 swimming races and 13 of 14 shooting events.

Besides its five in swimming, Japan won one gold in two-man team bowling, one in men's epee individual fencing and one in weightlifting, boosting its total count to 23 gold medals, 18 silver and 16 bronzes.

China, with its two dividing golds, one in shooting and one in women's team table tennis, had 19 golds, 16 silvers and 17 bronzes, falling behind for the first time in the medal race here.

North Korea won two sbooting golds, boosting its total gold count to nine, and host Thailand had four after winning the two-woman team bowling.

South Korea picked up its first two golds of the games in shooting and cycling, and Indonesia, Lebanon and Singapore won their first golds too.

Kuwait beaten
In soccer South Korea
Wednesday outclassed Kuwait,
2-0, to join Thailand, North Korea and Malaysia as certain qualifiers for the second round,

Thailand qualified without even playing, going through in their three-team group when North Korea hundled two-times champions Burma, who had already lost to the Thais, out of the competition.

The South Koreans were always on top in their clash with Kuwait — who should beat Bahrain in their last match to join their conquerors in the second round — and the ordy surprise in the game was how long it took the Koreans to score.

The South Koreans, 5-1 winners over Bahrain in their first game, are now leading scorers in the first round so far and look a fair bet for a medal

Chinese girl beats world dive mark

BANGKOK, Thailand, Dec. 13 (AP) — I'my Chinese high diver Chen Hisao-nsia bettered the women's world record, male teammate Lin Hang-lin bear the Orympic mark and Japan won tive swimming races wednesday, all in Games record

A Games record also fell in the sixth race of the day, the Women's 400-meter freestyle, won by 14-year-old Junie Sng of Singapore, who won a silver medal in the 200 treestyle 1 uesday.

Chen ,a 16-year-old Canton schoolgirl who practices daily at a nearby pool after school, dazzled the judges with her perfection, gaining 477.42 points. Teammate Yu. Tsien-ii scored 429.45.

Aoth are better than the world record of 412.71 set by Irina Kaltnina of the Soviet Union in Berlin this year, but will not go into the official record book because they were not set at a world championship meet. China, not a member of the international swimming federation, was not eligible to compete at the Berlin championship.

Together with Japan's Rikiko Yamanaka, who had 410.31, and Japan's Nituko Deie, who scored 379.65 for her diving, the Chinese also broke the Asian Games record of 372.72 set by China's Chung Chaochen in Tehran in 1974.

Mideast wins first medals

BANGKOK. Dec. 13 1AP}— Middle Eastern competitors in the seighth Asian Games took their first medals Wednesday, which included a record-breaking performance by a Lebanese weightlifter.

Mohammad Trabulis hefted 310 kilograms in the 75-kilogram class, beating the Asian Games record of 300 set by North Korean An Wan Geun in the 1974 Tehran Games. The Lebanese had 140 for the snatch and 170 for the jerk.

The other medal fell to Iraq's. Abdulkader Talal Hassoun, whose 302.5 total in the 82.5 kilogram weighlifting category earned him a bronze.

Eight Middle Eastern countries are participating in the Games. Lebanon, with five athletes and officials, forms the smallest contingent among the 25 nations at the Games.

Saudi Arabia recorded its best results since the opening day Saturday, beating Bahrain, 5-0, in table tennis and 15-12, 15-6, and 15-13 in volleyball.

The Saudi basketballers were however defeated by Pakistan in the last preliminary round, 20.57

Japan, the Philippines, Tuailand, China and the two Koreas will advance to the final round starting Thursday.

BUT WILL YOU BE READY?

SHORTLY YOU WILL HAVE THE CONVENIENCE OF DIALING DIRECT ALL OVER THE WORLD BUT YOU WILL ALSO HAVE THE EXPENSE IF THERE IS UNAUTHORISED

USE OF YOUR TELEPHONES. We have available electronic telephone systems that can assist you by either recording each number dialed by each extension, or restricting any telephone from dialing internationally. Many of these systems have been installed by us throughout the Kingdom and they are of particular interest to compounds, offices, hospitals and other locations where it is necessary to share out the cost of the telephone bill. Our Tele/Resources systems go up to 180 extensions and 12 trunks; we install and maintain this system anywhere in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia and can supply from stock.

arsaw endorses Ethiopian claims

WARSAW, Dec. 13 (R) Ethiopia and Poland Wednesday called on states in the Horn of Africa to give up their claims to other countries' territory, as a pre-condition for peace in the region.

The call was aimed at Somatia which recently lost a war with Ethiopia for control of the Ogaden Desert, It came in a joint communique issued after a three-day visit to Poland by Ethiopian head of state Mengistu Haile Mariam.

After the signing of several documents, Col. Mengistu left for Addis Ababa. Ethiopian Radio said he was greeted by

The communique said the nationalist guerrilla organizations had to be included in any settlements in Namibia and Rhodesia. It condemned what it said were attempts by South Africa to produce nuclear weapons.

The two countries also denounced "the adventurist policy of the Chinese leadership, contrary to the interests of the forces of progress peace and socialism in the world. Both countries condemn Chinese attempts to interfere 'n the internal affairs of states."

It was not clear how far Mengistu had been successful in Poland in obtaining economic aid - believed to have been a major aim of the East European tour.

Speaking at Wednesday s signing ceremony. Polish head of state Henryk Jablonski said the talks had been marked by "brotherly frankness," which in communist terms often means disagreement.

But the communique said there had been agreement in all problems discussed.

Apart from the communique and a declaration of friendship and cooperation. Poland and Ethiopia also signed a draft treaty on their economic talks and a cultural agreement. No details of the two latter documents were immediately released.

economic goods, like manufacturing technology, were just as important as the cost of Petroleum, he said.

Attiga stressed that OAPEC was principally an inter-Arab development organization which was not concerned with the question of prices.

He said the world was putting much pressure on oil exporters and diverting their attention from more important matters.

Oil ministers here have been debating the size of an expected oil price hike. But Aftiga cautioned that "Arab countries don't agree beforehand on the price of petroleum, and then force their decision the rest of OPEC."

The Arabs' target is to refine five to seven million barrels a day of the cruide of they produce, compared to two million barrels at present, Attiga said. Their daily output is 20.8 million barrels.

leaders, OAPEC chairman Ali Khalifa Al-Sabah, have said that any country which restricts entry of products refined by the Arabs could face cutbacks in shipments of crude of from its producers.

There's no reason why this has to be forced," Attiga said, noting that exports of refined products will eventually decrease as industrializing Arab economies absorb as much as half of their crude output.

Hussein

Hussein suggested that on such an occasion, it was possible that "a new start" could be made in the peace process.

Complete withdrawai of Israeli forces from territories occupied since 1967, including Arab Jerusalem and recognition of the legitimate rights of the Patesumans, including selfdetermination, such remains our concept of a lasting peace," he said.

ser Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, said Wednesday the Camp David agreement, if carried out, "would mean nothing but a new enslavement" of the Palestinian people. In an interview with conservative Paris daily "Figaro," Arafat said, "The project of administrative autonomy which Begin, Sadat and Carter propose to us tends to furnish a legal aspect to the Israeli occupation of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, no more and no less. "For the Palestinians, means a new enslavement of the Palestinian people, in the space of two months, Israel also has made its intentions clear by refusing to abolish the muitary government, in reserving properties of eminent gomain and in taking over control of water resources."

On Palestinian settlement in other Arab countries, Arafat

Vance : In a related development Yas said, "The fact is that even if we obtained a state, it would be too small to absorb to three million Palestinian exiles in the world, "In Lebanon, numerous Palestinians have taken up residence and some of them will remain in that country. It is a fact that must be faced."
